LIVES OF ROYAL WOMEN

Call for Proposals

This series features academic, yet accessible biographies of royal women - consorts, dowagers, royal mothers and female sovereigns - inclusive of all periods, cultures and geographic regions. These biographies include a deep engagement with the premise of queenship studies and the exercise of the queen’s office (or equivalent), in addition to covering the lives of particular women.

The series recognizes that different countries, cultures, monarchical structures had different titles, thus using the term ‘royal women’ not only encompasses queens and empresses but is useful for polygamous court structures. Such an approach allows us to consider important concubines/consorts and queen mothers who were often the most powerful women at court, as in the situation of Ottoman Valide sultans or in African monarchies. We are also willing to include women who were nearly queens, such as failed female claimants or the wives of heirs who predeceased their fathers, as well as welcoming combined biographies where appropriate.

The series is divided into three sub-strands:

- Queens of England;
- Queens and Empresses of Europe;
- Royal Women of the World.

The Series Editors are particularly interested to hear from academics working on royal women of Asia, Africa, Latin America and Europe in its broadest sense.

- Early English Queens 650-850
